WELCOME TO TALES OF TEA AT ST MARY'S GUILDHALL

St Mary's Guildhall is one of the finest surviving medieval guildhalls in the country, with its rich history of partying, power and propaganda. St Mary's Guildhall has acted as the centre of power in England during the War of the Roses, housed the crown jewels, been the prison of Mary Queen of Scots and hosted famous literary figures, such as George Eliot.

Running beneath the great hall where the famous Coventry Tapestry still hangs today is the Undercroft, where Tales of Tea is now located. The Undercroft would have historically been used to store a range of items over the centuries from food, to building materials and even barrels of gunpowder during the English Civil War. With direct access to the kitchen, the Undercroft was ideal to store food in preparation for feasts.

Today visitors can enjoy breakfast, brunch, lunch and afternoon tea in this atmospheric venue. If you have any special dietary requirements, please do not hesitate to ask a member of our team who will be more than happy to help. A full selection of bar drinks and a wine list to complement your afternoon tea is available.

Merchant and Craft Guilds were formed to protect and stabilise trade for the benefit of members and customers by ensuring a fair price and consistent standards. The wealth of the city was reflected in the Guild that built St Mary's Guildhall. Following the collapse of the wool trade in the 16th and 17th centuries, silk became the primary textile industry in Coventry - specifically silk ribbons for fashion.

A Draper would sell cloths or sewing materials. They would often have small family run shops which could be part of a larger Guild or Company. Over time this trade developed into a haberdasher or tailor role, and even now drapers make up an important part of the fashion industry - a very different role to their medieval counterparts.

THE UNDERCROFT –

THE RETURN OF THE GUILD

Four hundred years after the Guild of the Holy Trinity was dissolved, the Guildhall once again became a meeting place for a guild.

In 1946 the City of Coventry Freemen's Guild was formed.

The Great Hall once again hosts Guild dinners, banquets and ceremonies. Meetings were also held in the small Undercroft chamber, until it became part of the restaurant Tales of Tea.

The Freemen's Guild continues the medieval tradition of looking after the affairs of the city's freemen as well as promoting the city of Coventry and apprenticeships. In medieval Coventry only a freeman had full privileges of the city, which included the admission to trade guilds and the right to trade free of tolls.

An apprentice could only become a freeman, and be granted 'Freedom' of the city, by serving a five years' apprenticeship within the boundary of Coventry.

Even though a modern apprenticeship may not take five years, the person must continue to work in the same trade to make up the qualifying period.

Coventry Freedom cannot be inherited or purchased, as is the case in other cities. These qualifications are unique to Coventry's freemen. The 'Freedom' ceremony is held occasionally at St Mary's Guildhall.

Conducted by the Lord Mayor, the candidates swear allegiance to the city and are then given the freedom of the city.
